Dr. Pappo received his medical degree from Universidad Anahuac School of Medicine, Mexico City in 1984. He completed his pediatric residency at University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio, TX and his fellowship in Pediatric Hematology Oncology at Children's Medical Center of Dallas and the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas TX. Dr. Pappo was an Associate Member in the Department of Hematology Oncology, at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital from 1997-2001 and later rejoined the faculty staff in 2010 at St. Jude. Dr. Pappo has been the principal investigator of three prospective national clinical trials for the treatment of childhood rhabdomyosarcoma. He was the chair of the rare tumor committee of the Children's Oncology Group from 2001-2008. During this time, he developed the clinical infrastructure needed to conduct trials in pediatric rare tumors and facilitated the development of a trial to enhance the ability to collect tumor samples from these patients. More recently he was the US PI for the IGF1-R monoclonal antibody R1507. Dr. Pappo's current interests are to develop rational clinical studies for pediatric sarcomas based on robust animal models that are being developed by Dr. Michael Dyer. His research interest is in developing novel therapies for pediatric solid tumors with special interest in pediatric melanoma, soft tissue sarcomas and pediatric gastrointestinal stromal tumors.
